A review about my town's festival.

K3

Hello, everyone who may read my review. In my town, a festival is being organized. It's about young people's startups that are aimed at shaping a better future world. There's a lot of interesting projects and ideas. I, however, want to focus on a certain startup that caught my attention.

This startup is about an en masse installation of solar panels to every household. While the idea is ambitious, if not near-impossible, it is certainly unique, at least because of why they want to do this in the first place. The proposers argue that the amount of energy needed to power every home is unimaginably big, and by installing solar panels, we'll use less energy and help the environment, since most of electrical power comes from non eco-friendly sources. If such plan will be enacted, our society as a whole will become more green.

Of course, such project will require a lot of resources and time to be fully completed, because of this, I'm interested how they plan to work around it. 175

While I was exploring the festival, I asked several people about their opinions about it, their answers were as follows: "I'm really suprised by some of the proposed ideas, but I can see every single one helping us in the future." and "I already found a couple favourites and I didn't even finish exploring the place fully."

As for me, I think such festivals are crucial for the ~~you~~ young generation, since it allows easy exchange of ideas and improvements.
