Where young talents meet

The Bright Tomorrow festival, long awaited by our town's youth, has finally arrived. As someone who was looking forward to it, I can definitely say that it didn't disappoint me. The festival brought many promising ideas, but for me, the particularly intriguing one was presented by young ecologists. Their startup's subject is <sup>учреждению</sup> the illumination of our streets, which already sounds unique to me, because we seldom think about it. Ecologists <sup>учреждению</sup> propose to suggest changing its color and the ~~lights~~ shapes of lanterns. This way it's possible to save energy and reduce light pollution, which affects wildlife like bats and night birds. This idea can not only benefit the ecology, but also make cityscapes more visually exciting.

Making your startup <sup>учреждению</sup> ~~come~~ true reality is never easy. It requires money, and it can be difficult to find <sup>учреждению</sup> not every person who has it would invest into something <sup>that's</sup> not immediately profitable. Some people are also going to protest against new ideas due to their lack of understanding their purpose. But I'm sure that most of our young activists will find support among <sup>older</sup> citizens. <sup>Alexander</sup> Nikolaj, an elderly visitor, says: "So many young talents gives me hope for our future". <sup>Seeing so</sup> Victoria, a 30 years old veterinarian <sup>учреждению</sup> 30-year old Victoria shares: "My son dreams of participating in this someday. I'm going to help him with everything I can".

In my opinion, such events like The Bright Tomorrow are extremely important. They allow young people to be heard and really <sup>change the future.</sup> make a change. As for the visitors, they can be inspired to make our world better too.
