Jane Baker Comments on <sup>Her</sup> Future Book

I. Today I'm talking with Jane Baker, a well-known author who has recently come back to Britain. Hello, miss Baker. Thanks for coming.

JB. Hello!

I. There has been a rumour that you're thinking of writing a new book. If it is true, could you give us a clue what it is going to be about?

JB. Of course. My intention is to create a cosy detective for the young. ~~The events will take place at~~ A group of friends ~~start~~ finds a mysterious message and <sup>starts</sup> ~~tries~~ an investigation. What happens next? I ~~can't~~ <sup>can't</sup> tell you for sure. (Laughs)

I. The idea sounds amazing! Was that your return that inspired you?

JB. Yes, you're right. The setting of my new book is based on my hometown, Greentown. There are a few parks, <sup>some</sup> long ~~long~~ alleys and a square with a <sup>water</sup> fountain. The atmosphere ~~should~~ <sup>is</sup> be ~~pleasant~~ warm and comfortable.

I. I see. You love your hometown, don't you?

JB. A lot. Actually, I've referenced Greentown in ~~all~~ my previous novels. I enjoy reminiscing about my childhood and places where I used to live.

I. That's sensational news! We should all reread your fiction to recognise the town. Could you say that it is the splitting image of real Greentown?

JB. Frankly speaking, it's not. It's more modern, with new houses and wide roads.

I. How do you feel about the transformation of the town?

JB. Personally, Greentown lost its charm ~~in~~. It looks <sup>vgr</sup>
